Resource Title	Single-person Households
Resource Abstract	As a rule, three population segments tend to form single households: single older persons, divorced or separated persons of the middle generation, and young singles, often establishing their first household at a place of work or training. The number of single-person households has been on the increase for some time, mainly as a result of changed social forms of living. Changes in mobility and leisure behavior plus rising living standards have also contributed to this trend. The rising number of divorces and the fall in the number of new marriages, sinking birth rates plus rising life expectancy are other major causes for this development.
